Numbers are not handy - have an inquiry into NDOW

But I know we discussed the notion that 95% or so of all leks, or birds, or both were in PPMA and PGMA combined, right? Perhaps this came from NDOW? Or perhaps this is for the state's/Coate's new map?

Ted,

Thanks for returning my call.  Here is the table we discussed.

Mike,

This is the info we pulled from the Great Basin draft plans last year.  I don't have updated #s for the proposed plans.  Note, nevada didn't include these #s in their draft plan.

Hope that helps.  Let me know if you need me to try to track down anything else.

I spent most of yesterday trying to find the information for Nevada's 1,100 page DEIS. Finally today I broke down and just called them. Turns out it's not in there! Frankly, I'm just happy to find out that I'm not going blind. The rest of the states are included in the attached table.

I was going to come chat about the results with you but I know you're on a phone call... For Idaho, the info for Alternative D actually came from a different report (because they apparently couldn't squeeze one more paragraph into the 900 page DEIS).

I put all the different metrics in quotes instead of changing the wording so you could see exactly how everything was written originally just in case there are minor differences. I know we discussed gathering additional metrics but there's not a whole lot more out there. I may be able to gather specific numbers of leks and males. I'm going to continue working on Utah and Nevada. Let me know if you'd like me to add those items in.
