Yes. This gets confusing but I'll try to explain my side of it... In my experience the folder in the status review SharePoint site is kind of a catch-all dropbox for literature. I keep my "library" of literature that's not available online in the other SharePoint folder for use on RefWorks (because that's where it was stored before everything began). I have always planned on uploading that folder to the status review SharePoint folder when we pause the process in September. Uploading each individual pdf to both places right now would be unnecessarily complicated and time consuming.

Or are we uploading copies of all referenced material? And this is going into the Reference and Citations folder on the sage-grouse status review SharePoint - correct?
