Kevin,

I think that's fair enough... just want to make sure we're not missing any big items on the CED side.
I'll holler tomorrow when I get a chance.

That is why I have been holding off, because I did not want to lead the group astray. I can take an educated guess and we can have a good talk about it.

I have questions/concerns as to how the data collected from the CED will be useful to the modeling efforts -- or minimally, maybe I just need to a refresher on what you're thinking related to the data needed and those collected in the CED.

In regards to the information collected in the CED, the train is 'fully loaded and about to depart the station', so if there's a need to collect information in the CED for the purpose of modeling efforts, we should get it incorporated sooner than later... preferably during our testing phase -- assuming the CED in the primary source for that information, and if not, maybe we have more flexibility.

Lief,

FYI, I am still waiting on getting clarity on the modeling side of things before I think I can be useful to this group. We hope to have a decision on how we are going to proceed by May 22nd. After we decisions on the metrics and risks that are going to be modeled we definitively need to start chating to make sure the database will be able to answer those questions.

Cheers

ps hopefully you kids is starting to sleep a bit more!
