You're not difficult Lara!! :) We're stepping a fine line between simplicity and clarity, though we also shouldn't overstate what it is (i.e., "Decision"). Prehaps we're making something out of nothing since the actual URL will be a random address (i.e., https://www.sciencebase.gov/catalog/folder/52015a07e4b009d47a4c2507) but the name we use will be in the folder tree.

How about: Sage Grouse Conservation Status 2015

then we'll fold the existing Sage grouse Conservation Efforts Database inside the above/

I think it might be nice to have a time-stamp in the title to keep it clear that this isn't the 2010 review for people looking at this in ten years, so what about "2015 GR Sage-grouse Status Review"? It isn't real short, but I don't believe this will impact URLs that people would ever be typing (I think they'd just be clicking links).

Thoughts?

We will need a name for it, and we wanted to get your input on what would be a politically savvy name.
