Mike

I did some checking around the office and can say that we have used CHAT products in Utah for some sage grouse related issues. However, use to date office-wide is fairly spotty and inconsistent. Since we don't have any GIS dedicated staff it is a matter of if the individual biologist has figured out what is available and if it is useful to them

Hey guys, see my note to my R1, 2, and 8 colleagues. Are any of your offices using the State Crucial Habitat mapping products?

Hey guys, I get to go into the WGA Wildlife Council meeting next week to discuss our progress on LEAP. Michael Bean is also presenting on our coordination with the State CHAT products. We have a MOU that says something to the effect that we (the Service) will use State data and products as much as we can. Michael was asking if any of our office were using the State CHAT mapping products at all. Do you know or can you find out if we are? Thanks
