

I Spy...

After spending time at the Department of the Interior, the Blue Goose decided he wasn't quite ready to leave the exciting city of Washington, D.C. Ever since he was a little blue gosling he wanted to fulfill his dream of becoming an International Waterfowl of Mystery – what better place to learn the ropes of the spy game than the International Spy Museum? After all, he does have a lot of experience doing aerial reconnaissance at Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge!

The Blue Goose reports that he had an amazing time learning about the mysteries and intrigue of international espionage! He stated that he would now use his new super sleuth skills in finding future destinations to explore and share with us all.
