

Southeast Alaska Personal Use Fisheries

1. Where can an individual obtain a permit for shrimp trawling?
2. What are the age restrictions for personal use fishing?
3. Harvest, bag and possession, and pot limits for shellfish allowed under personal use may or may not be added to those allowed for subsistence or sport fishing?
4. What shellfish might an individual fish for in Southeast Alaska?
5. What kind of gear may be used for harvesting shrimp?
6. What kind of gear may be used for harvesting clams?
7. What gear may not be used for harvesting abalone?
8. Is it lawful to buy, sell, trade or barter personal use caught shellfish, their parts, or their eggs?

9. What information must be legibly inscribed on a keg or buoy attached to each pot?

10. What are the number of pots that can be used in the taking of crab?

11. A pot used to take king crab must have the following features:

12. No person may mutilate or disfigure any crab until what takes place

13. True or false? Commercial shellfish fishermen may retain part of their lawfully taken commercial catch of shellfish for their personal use?

14. May female crab be retained for personal use?

15. Explain the color coded bag and possession limit system for king crab taken east of Cape Spencer.

16. True or false? Most personal use shellfish fisheries are open all year.