	What will USFWS response be if wolves attack any livestock down already from disease, such as BSE? Or, if wolves attack any elk or deer are on leased public lands, whether the animal is diseased or not.. yet, in CO, the odds of the elk or deer being infected with CWD is pretty high! If my questions are not answered on this video, I will submit to the local newspapers.	Debra Taylor	dltaylor52	live answered	3/22/2023 18:35	3/22/2023 19:14	Joe Szuszwalak	joseph_szuszwalak@fws.gov

12	In regards of lethal take "caught in the act" how does one get a permit that covers that? Does one apply for a permit "in case of" the situation? Or does it happen after the caught in the act happens?	Cindy Harder	charder@	live answered	3/22/2023 19:13	3/22/2023 19:25	"Lori Fox, WSP" lori.fox@wsp.com
13	Intolerance of wolves and poaching of wolves rise when the government culls wolves, uses lethal control, and tolerance of wolves does not increase when wolf hunting and trapping is initiated allowing the 10(j) will lead down a path of hunting wolves which goes against the stute which was passed in CO, therefore will you address the fact that killing wolves for predator control is not the best use of science as peer review research presented by Trves, etal, clearly demonstrate that prevention and non-lethal coexistence tools are more effective than lethal control for preventing conflicts between wolves and livestock, and this research suggests suspending lethal control methods that do not have evidence in preventing livestock loss, so my question will you require producers to use non-lethal coexistence strategies as they are shown to be a more effective tool and why would you leran towards allowing permits to kill tules through a 10(j) rule when best science sas not to?	Rhonda Dern	rhondader	live answered	3/22/2023 19:14	3/22/2023 19:28	"Lori Fox, WSP" lori.fox@wsp.com
14	If the state plan will supercede the fed 10(j) rule, what is the purpose of the 10(j) rule. Legal requirement? for benefit if wolves go on and off ES list?	Robyn Cascade	northernsc	live answered	3/22/2023 19:17	3/22/2023 19:30	"Lori Fox, WSP" lori.fox@wsp.com

16	Will there be any responsibility on part of livestock operators or pet/working dog owners to take common sense and well established precautions to minimize likelihood of conflicts? Allowing lethal control of wolves on public lands that belong to wildlife, where there is a legal blnding public trust doctrine and best science says current ecological knowledge indicates that large carnivores are necessary for the maintenance of biodiversity and ecosystem function and that human actions cannot replace the ecological role of carnivores. and knowing that livestock has a detrimental effect of wolf habitaton public lands, will you elaborate on how you will protect the habitat for wolves on public lands from livestock, and allow wolves to be able to enrich the biodiversity as is their role as apex carnivores in our ecosystem, and not allow lethal control of wolves on public lands whic should be their safe habitat, for

Livestock operators in New Mexico and Northern Rockies have pressured Wildlife Services and others in wildlife management as reported by Intercept and Carter Niemeyer to certify that wolves killed livestock when there was little to no evidence that they were involved.

26 How will this be monitored/addressed in Colorado?

Wildlife
Refuges, this

USFS or

allowing cattle to graze on our public lands has lead to soil destruction, PEER, public employees for environmental responsibility are urging Deb Haaland to address the harmful effects of cattle grazing on public lands. The primary cause of desertification in the west has been livestock grazing, it is irrefutable, grazing on public lands has resulted in soil carbonloss, and at the same time we are seeing lower water holding capacity less root mass , a loss of species, all exacerbated by climate change, therefore cattle grazing should be a major focus of your EIS and their degradation of habitat need for wolves to thrive, so 29 will you please stop the leasing of public lands to livestock producers?

When would you anticipate wolves reaching/migrating to the front

The 10j rule as proposed allows for the lethal taking of a wolf that is "harassing" livestock...how is that defined? Is a wolf just walking through a calving pasture with cattle reacting to it considered to be harassing those livestock? It seems like a major allowance. The requirements for reporting and demonstrating that there was an 55 "attack" occurring are great, but it's not clear what's allowed.
