Choose your favorite name for the Puerto Rican Parrot Aviary.

January 18-February 15, 2007

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service works to recover the Puerto Rican Parrot so that it no longer needs human intervention to ensure its survival. To achieve this goal we are building a state-of-the-art aviary with the best veterinary care to maximize the number of parrots available to release into the wild.

You can be part of this effort by:

1. Placing an X next to the name you prefer for the new aviary.
2. Sending this form to the fax number or mailing address listed below by February 15, 2007.

Choose one of the following names:

- Iguaca Aviary: Iguaca is the indigenous name for the Puerto Rican Parrot.
- Borincano Aviary: Puerto Rican, or relative to Puerto Rico, rooting from Boriken, the indigenous name for the island.
- Esmeralda Aviary: Emerald, for the emerald green color of the parrot's feathers:
- Esperanza Aviary: Hope, symbolic of hope for the recovery of the species.
- Rio Grande Aviary: Name of the municipality where the aviary is located.
