

Traveling Abroad with Your Pet Bird

Princess Parrot, CITES Appendix II

Prab Bhatia CC BY-NC-ND 2.0

The Wild Bird Conservation Act (Act), a significant step in international conservation efforts to protect exotic birds subject to trade, became effective on October 23, 1992.

The Act focuses on bird species listed in the Appendices to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES). Since most exotic pet birds (including parrots, cockatoos, and macaws but excepting budgerigars and cockatiels) are species listed under CITES, most are affected by the Act. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (Service) issued regulations implementing the Act that provide for permits to allow foreign travel with your pet bird (domestic travel and sales are not affected). If you plan to take your pet bird with you on foreign travel, or your residence has been outside the United States for at least one year and you plan to travel to the United States with a pet bird, you will need to have a permit before you travel. These regulations are in addition to any other existing requirements of CITES, the Endangered Species Act, and other applicable statutes. If you are unsure whether these regulations apply to you, contact the Service's Division of Management Authority at the address provided.

Leaving the United States with Your Pet Bird

To ensure that you will be allowed to bring your pet bird back into the United States from travel abroad, you will need to take the following steps before you leave:

1. Obtain a valid CITES permit from the Division of Management Authority. Applications for permits must be received in that office at least 30 days in advance of anticipated travel.
2. Have your permit validated by a Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife Inspector before you leave the United States. (Instructions will be provided on the permit.)
3. Take a copy of your validated permit with you. This copy must be presented when you re-enter the United States with your pet.
4. Find out whether the country(ies) you plan to visit have additional import and export requirements and restrictions.

At a minimum, a re-export certificate from the country(ies) visited will be required. The Division of Management Authority can provide you with a contact address, phone or fax number for CITES permits offices in other countries.

There are no restrictions on the length of time you may travel abroad or on the number of birds you may take with you.

Traveling to the United States with Your Pet Bird

If your pet bird was acquired outside the United States and you have resided outside the United States constantly for 1 year, you may import a maximum of two pet birds per person, per year, if all applicable requirements have been met prior to their arrival in the United States. Following are the steps you need to take before you leave for the United States:

1. Obtain a valid permit from the Division of Management Authority. Applications for permits must be received in that office at least 45 days in advance of anticipated travel.
2. Obtain documented evidence that you have resided outside the United States continuously for a minimum of 1 year.
3. Obtain documented evidence that each bird was acquired legally.
4. Obtain all other necessary permits from the country(ies) of export, including a CITES permit.

Note: The Act restricts the number of pet birds individuals may import into the United States annually. However, if your bird is one of the following species you do not need a WBCA permit to import your pet .
