Injurious Wildlife

AGENCY: Fish and Wildlife Service, Interior.

ACTION: Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is responsible for implementing the "injurious" provisions of the Lacey Act (18 U.S.C. 42). Section 42 of this Act and our companion implementing regulations in 50 CFR Part 16 restrict importation into, or the transportation of live wildlife or eggs thereof between, the continental United States, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or any territory or possession of the United States of any non-indigenous species of fish or wildlife determined to be injurious to the interests of the United States. However, injurious fish and wildlife may be imported by permit for zoological, educational, medical, or scientific purposes, or without a permit by Federal agencies solely for their own use. Our implementing regulations include lists of fish and wildlife determined to be injurious to the United States as described above. We also implement Executive Order 13112 on invasive species.

To assist us in identifying non-indigenous fish and wildlife that warrant our consideration as injurious, we ask for your comments on non-native animals that you believe should be prohibited entry into the United States, its possessions, or territories. When submitting your suggestions, please include background and available documentation to support your contention that such animals are, or would be, injurious to U.S. interests and should be added to our regulations.

We will accept and consider petitions after June 7, 2000 requesting that we list non-indigenous fish or wildlife that you believe to be injurious to U.S. interests, even if you are not presently aware of any such animals and you do not submit any comments in response to this Notice.

Jamie Rappaport-Clark, Director, Fish and Wildlife Service.
