Thanks for the update Terry. Obviously, the sooner you can start reviewing the other categories, the better prepared we'll be if there are problems or roadblocks (software glitches, internet issues, questions on the process, etc.), and we won't be as pressured by an approaching deadline. And just because the first round was "quite easy" does not mean the second will be too (though hopefully it will be). Thanks again. Nathan FYI, I am done with the first round of the conservation effort review. The first category, energy projects that proponents say are complete and effective, was quite easy since it turned out I only had one in MZ 2 to address. And it turned out that it was actually in UT. It bumped up against CO so CO was included. Per instructions from Lief W. I entered info that Jay Martini from UT entered but noted in the CO spreadsheet that the project was entirely within UT. I start on review of CE's for other categories tomorrow or next Friday. I have the boreal toad conservation plan update meeting and a GRSG CHE call M-Th next week.
