

2018 – Dr. Jay Odenbaugh

In 2018, we were excited and privileged to have Dr. Jay Odenbaugh as the keynote speaker at Science Of The Service. Dr. Odenbaugh was an Associate Professor of Philosophy and the Department Chair at Lewis & Clark College. Dr. Odenbaugh's research has focused on foundational issues related to the sciences, especially in evolutionary biology and ecology. His work has focused on examining topics that include: the strategies that scientists employ to use highly idealized models in the face of limited data; the nature of species, communities, and ecosystems; as well as the role of consensus, dissent, and advocacy in science and policy. Dr. Odenbaugh's experience and expertise related directly to Science Of The Service, which aimed to highlight the relationship between science and decision-making or policy.

Learn more: <http://jay-odenbaugh.squarespace.com/>