

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Branch of Foreign Species Workload

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Branch of Foreign Species reviews the status of rare plants and animals in countries around the world. In 2011, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was actively working on many species in South America. Each country is represented by a shade from yellow to red indicating the number of species that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Branch of Foreign species is reviewing for possible listing as Endangered or Threatened.

N
500 Miles

This map is for reference only. No guarantees are made as to accuracy or integrity of the data presented.
K. Norman, USFWS 2011