

Mountain View Trail

Trail Information:

Uses: Pedestrian Access Only

Length: ~1.0 mile (one way)

Type: Out and Back

Surface: Gravel

Average width: 12 feet

Max slope: 5%

Benches: A couple located at viewpoint

Trail Description: Accessed via the parking lot at the main trail head, the Mountain View Trail is named for the view of Mt. Hood you can see on a clear day. The trail sits high on top of the west levee, which provides flood protection for the Port and neighboring residents while allowing Gibbons Creek to flow more naturally into the floodplain below. From it you might see raptors, and swallows soaring by and ducks and geese in the wetlands. The trail also serves as a road occasionally used for maintenance.

Gibbons Creek Wildlife Art Trail

Trail Information:

Uses: Pedestrian Access Only

Length: ~1.0 mile (one way)

Type: Connector trail

Surface: Gravel

Average width: 6 feet

Max slope: 5%

Benches: At Redtail Lake, and between the two bridges

Trail Description:

Along the Gibbons Creek Wildlife Art Trail you will not find signs to read, but art to discover as you explore. Look for quotes hidden among the stone benches, unique sculptures, and wildlife cutouts to lock your bikes on. We hope this art will inspire you to wonder about the nature it represents.

Accessed from the Refuge River Trail, it wraps around Redtail Lake and over two bridges before reconnecting again with the Refuge River Trail. Look for turtles basking on sunny days at the lake as well as Great blue herons.

Refuge River Trail

Trail Information:

Uses: Pedestrians, Joggers, Horseback riding, Cyclists, and Dogs on Leash

Length: ~2.5 mile (one way)

Type: Out and Back

Surface: Gravel, unfinished soft sandy section

Average width: 12 feet

Max slope: 5%

Benches: A couple located before the third bridge and at viewpoint

Trail Description: The Refuge River Trail is the only multi-use trail on the Refuge allowing visitors the unique opportunity to experience the Refuge with a bicycle, horse, or leashed dog. The trail parallels the Columbia River and then meanders further into the Refuge. It is accessed from the western boundary of the Refuge near Index Street (~1 mile to reach Redtail Lake), or from the Mountain View Trail (open to pedestrians only). The trail then continues 2.5 miles crossing channels that connect the Refuge and the River.

U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service

STEIGERWALD LAKE

National Wildlife Refuge
Trails Map

Enjoy Your Refuge

National Wildlife Refuges are a special place for people and wildlife. Refuges provide wildlife a place to be wild. They also offer people a place to relax and enjoy nature in peace and quiet. Refuges are a sanctuary for everything visiting them.

Please Protect Your Refuge as you Enjoy It.

Day Use Only

Visit our website to learn more about the Refuge and what time we close today.

www.fws.gov/refuge/Steigerwald-Lake

STEIGERWALD LAKE

National Wildlife Refuge

Trail Map

Protect the Refuge and Please stay on the trails

Mountain View Trail (pedestrian only)

Refuge River Trail (multi-use allows: bikes, horses, jogging, dogs on leash)

Refuge River Trail (unfinished soft sandy section of trail, multi-use allows: bikes, horses, jogging, dogs on leash))

Gibbons Creek Wildlife Art Trail (pedestrian only)

Viewpoint

Bridge

WA SR-14

Road

Service Road

Pit Toilets (non-flushing)

Trail head

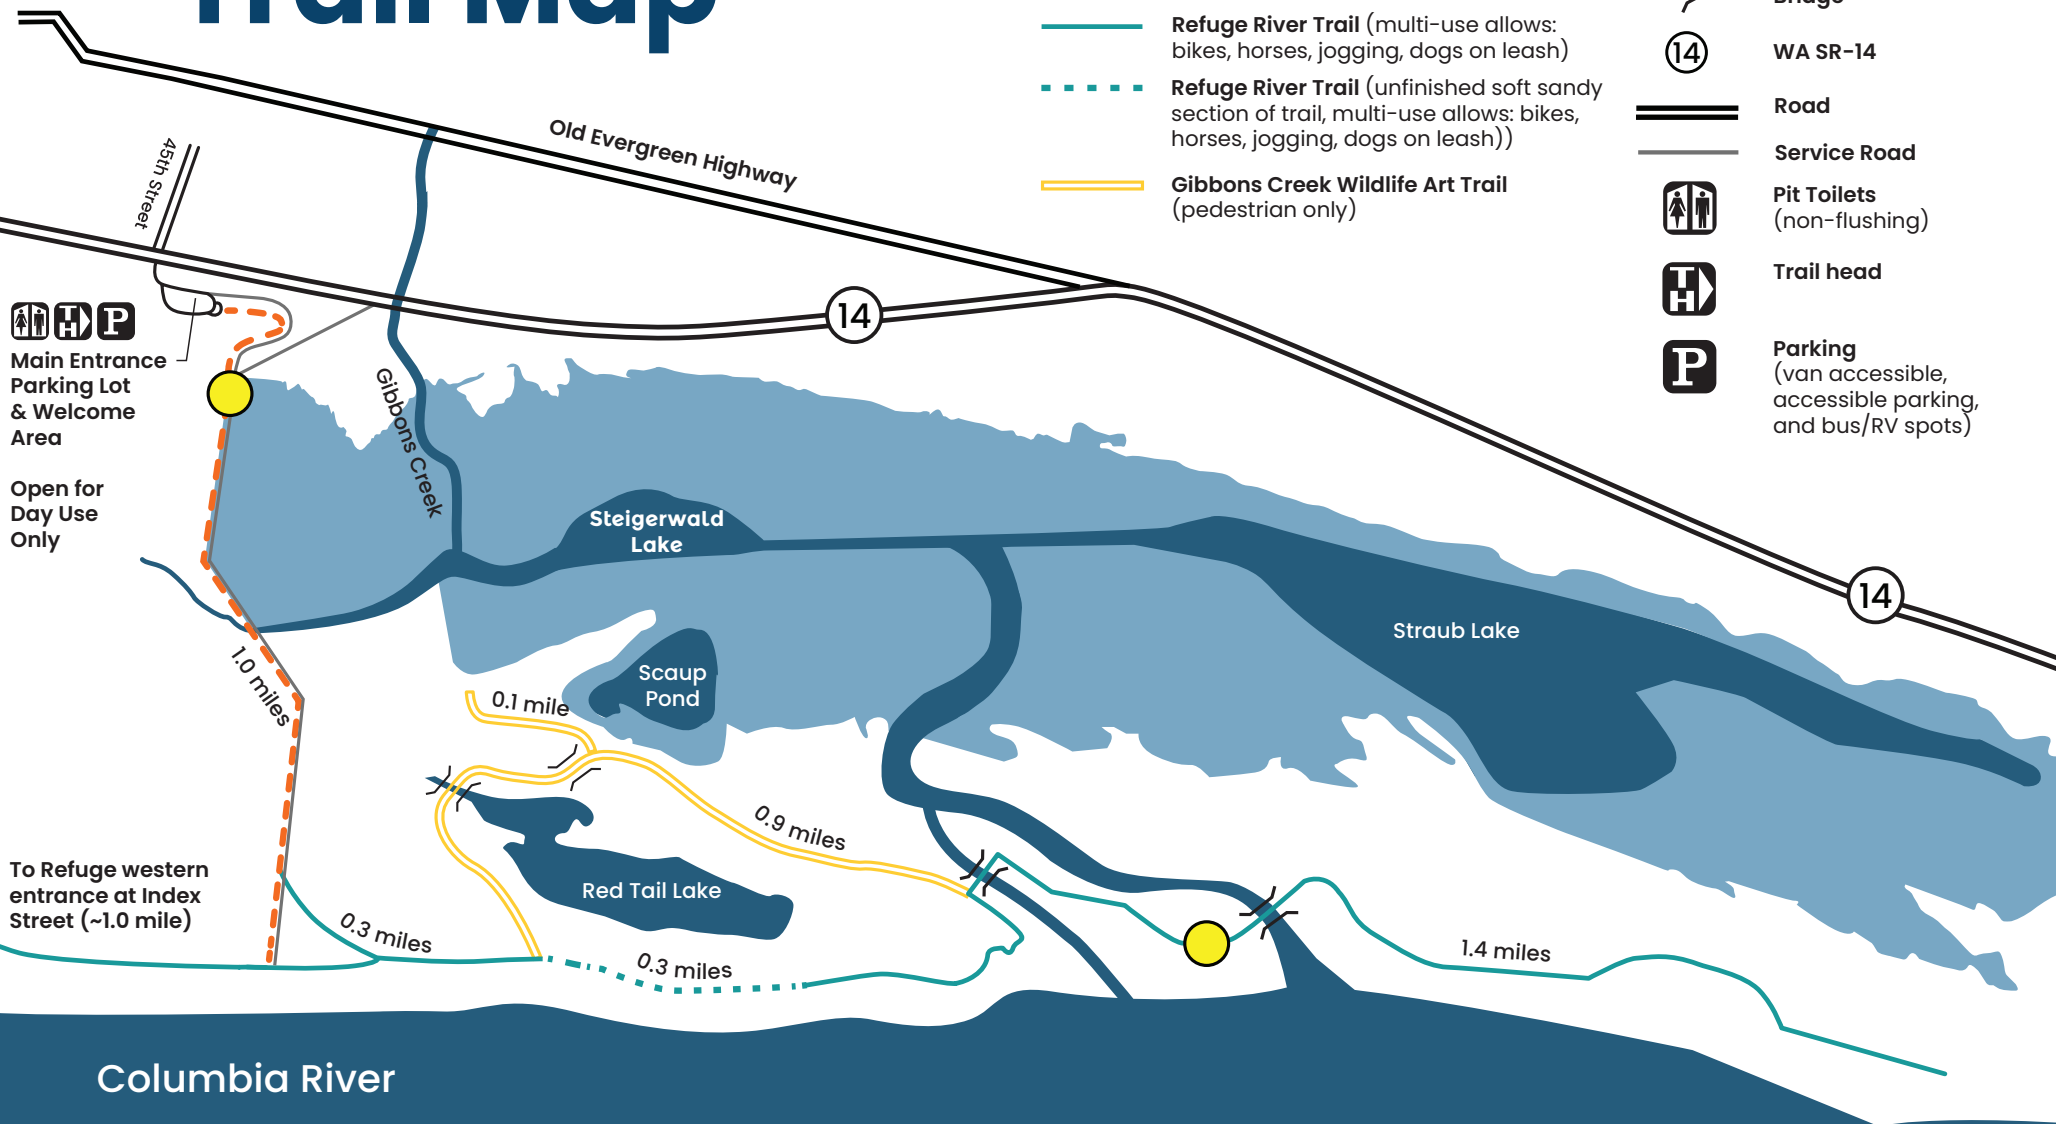

Parking (van accessible, accessible parking, and bus/RV spots)

Main Entrance Parking Lot & Welcome Area

Open for Day Use Only

To Refuge western entrance at Index Street (~1.0 mile)

Columbia River