Mokore Safaris are paid a trophy fee for each animal shot or wounded by a client. This money is then banked into the Mokore Safaris Account in Zimbabwe. This money is used towards wildlife surveys which will determine the population of a species followed by an allocation of quota settings which is given to each area and subsequently on to the operator so that he or she may off-take a set amount of animals each year thus generating in an income that will go back into wildlife. These quota settings are strict and have to be adhered to otherwise the operator can and will face extreme penalties. It is impossible to export an animal out of Zimbabwe without an allocated quota given by the Zimbabwean Government. We, Mokore Safaris, pay a monthly levy to the Save Valley Conservancy who use this money to run the Conservancy, parts of this to fund different research programs taking place within the Save Valley Conservancy such as the wild dog re-habilitation and the re-introduction of white and black rhino, all of which have been hugely successful. The Save Valley Conservancy now has the largest concentration of white rhino in Southern Africa. There are always a number of projects being started up which we will continue to support. This levy that is paid to the Save Valley Conservancy is also used to pay scouts who conduct anti-poaching control throughout the Conservancy
