Also, I have been putting the individual comment documents onto the Teams site in this folder as I received them. I am waiting until Monday to combine them all into one document!

Indeed my plan was to consolidate everything into one document (yay Word combine functions) and put it on our teams site. I will share the link to that document on Monday (we may still receive a few stragglers today). I would start working through some of the comments that don't require discussion or collaboration, or at least make an attempt to address as many comments as I can (in tracked changes). Then we can discuss my edits or any remaining tricky comments on the call. Of course, if folks want to be following along with my edits next week, they can! I think it will just be easier for one person to take a first pass at addressing things.

So does this mean you won't be sharing the comments/edits with this group until this meeting? Would it help if we consolidated into one version, review individually, and then be ready to discuss together? Can you shed some light on potentially "tricky" issues?

Where:

Hi everyone,

A few comments/edits have trickled in from the internal review. I am going to do my best to address as much as I can next week. I am on leave on Thursday and Friday (2/11 and 2/12) so let's touch base the morning after President's Day to go over any changes and discuss any tricky comments together. We must have a final version to put into surname by February 22, so hopefully we won't be changing anything major. Let me know if you have any concerns about this plan.

Thanks!

Alex
