Yep, totally agree with Justin, no need to print. I would just keep electronic copies of the rest of the comments from regulations.gov for the admin record. Taking the bulk download files that PPM provided and burning to a cd would be one way to do it.

We have received hard copies of all comments that were mailed to the processing center, stamped, and entered into regulations.gov. We are planning on indexing them and putting them into binders for permanent access/storage. Do we need to print off comments that were just entered into regulations.gov and include them in the binders also?
