In response to Kerry's comment of habituation: "When you have a high quality food sources such as a carcass within 100 meters of an open road even a non-habituated bear will often use it. Is there a scientific abases for the 100 meter designation?"

I recently did an extensive literature review on habituation and do not know of any scientific basis for 100 meters. That is the same wording from the 2007 Conservation Strategy so I am unsure where that originated from. I would suggest removing "or within 100 meters of open roads" from the text.

Ok, here is the updated version as of this morning. I provided you with some edits yesterday, Loren provided some suggested changes (which we included), and Jeff provided a few changes this morning that we included. I also left the comments Jeff provided in the document so you can see why we made those changes. Loren brought up a question about the JDRP regarding who carries out the management there. The document currently shows that the Park Service does this but we will want to ask Brian if this is the case or if the Wyoming Game and Fish handle this management. I am asking that you provide me with any further comments by this Friday and we will try to wrap this up and get it in to the steering committee for final review. Thanks for all of your time and consideration on this document.
