Chris,

That is one of those private for profit magazines, mostly full of advertisements. They need to generate articles to get people to look through the magazine to see the adds they sell space for. The magazines are generally distributed for free at places tourists visit. Their articles tend to be on the positive side of things (their readers are happy tourists). I don't believe their intentions are to create controversy. So relatively small readership in a localized area (GYE).

Hello Chris,

I'm working on a short piece about Yellowstone region grizzlies and their potential delisting from the ESA this year for Yellowstone Journal magazine. Do you have time this week for an interview? I'd like to hear the USFWS argument for delisting the bears as well as your take on the challenges that would face such a move.

My schedule this week is flexible, so just let me know what times work for you.

Thanks,
