Agreed. I had hoped to schedule this sit down with the enviro groups before that meeting to prepare the ground a bit, so I would favor Mon Nov 2 for that if that works for you. Have you been able to work through the trigger issue re female mortality?

Thanks Bob – it looks like the best time for the most folks would be Monday, Nov. 2 or the morning of Thursday, Nov. 5. Nov. 6 could also work if necessary but is less optimal. The issue is that there is an IGBC meeting in Jackson that week so several people are coordinating schedules around that. Best,

I think we would be happy to include everyone in the NGO community who is involved with the grizzly. We understand there will be a diversity of views about delisting, but we think it will be helpful if we describe our perspective about future management and have a candid discussion with you before we go forward with any delisting proposal.

Thanks Bob – I think we were aiming for the last week of October so I will need to do another round of checking about the first week of November and get back to you asap.

One question I have for you: Would you like to broaden the discussion to include additional organizations that have not engaged in our discussions to date but that are likely to engage with the delisting rule, through litigation or otherwise, such as Western Watersheds Project or Wyoming Wildlife Advocates? Or would you like to keep the group to the organizations that have engaged in a discussion with you to date?

Sorry, Tim and Andrew, but I managed to overlook our Directorate meeting, which is the last week in Oct. in San Antonio. We could potentially still meet on Thur or Friday the week before (!0/22 or 23), or else we should aim for the first week in Nov.

Tim and Andrew, we'd like to convene a meeting in late October with the environmental groups who work on grizzly bear conservation to update you on where we are on a delisting proposal. We've been having constructive discussions with the states, and hope to be in a position by that point to describe at least the outline of an approach for future bear management that could support delisting. Can you check on the groups' availability for a meeting the last week of October (or possibly October 22 or 23)?
