Ok, thanks. Apparently per the 2012 planning rule, they are moving away from that approach so we might need to change that after talking with them.

Yes, the Rule says the grizzly will remain on the USFS list of Sensitive Species after delisting (pp.99-100 of the PDF of the signed rule).

Chris,

I just got a call from USFS HQ asking if our rule or associated documents referenced that the USFS would manage GB as either a “sensitive species” or “species of conservation concern”. I don’t recall reading that but they have heard from NGO’s asking questions so I said I would find out. Thanks.
