Please pass along my gratitude for all her help with this - though it's not quite over yet!
Hopefully this will go smoother next time with our friends to the North.

I owe a lot of thanks to Sue Zwicker at the Smithsonian. She did a lot of research on this and her suggestions and ideas helped me in dealing with the Canadians. I think her final push made it happen. There were several other librarians that all pulled together to help me too. See Sue's e-mail below. Let's just hope that this is what Betty needs.

Well that's great news!

I was about to try to track down a library in the Komi Republic of Russia to see what I could dig up (now my fun is spoiled ;-)).

Let me know what happens!

(and any idea why suddenly you can just have a copy??!?)

Hi Sue, and Wayne,

I emailed Wayne this morning – he can forward that email to the University Archives and they should have no problem sending you a copy of the item.

You guys are the most dedicated librarians I have seen in a long time!! Excellent work ☺

If the archives do not accept the email, please email me directly and I will call them.

Take care,

Julie Anne

Ecology of the Elk Transactions of the Pechora-Ilych State Game Preserve - E.P. Knorre
1959

Bonjour! Hello!

I am working to assist a colleague in tracking down an alternative source for a copy of the above referenced item.

Apparently, information in this document, if confirmed, might be the difference between the wolverine in the Lake Tahoe area being listed or not getting listed (U.S. Federal government protection).

I understand that copyright concerns prevent you from sharing the document in its entirety. Would it be possible, however, to scan the title page, and other identifying information (in English &/or the original Russian) that can assist us in identifying another copy?

Thanks and regards,

--Sue
