Hi Sue,

I brought the issue up with the marketing manager and we both thought you had a good point. So I added a new question #2 about where it can be used, and tightened up some of the other answers. We think it really improved it. Thanks!!

Katie

Hi Sue,

Please don't hesitate to ask about anything. I think that's a good question and I hope my answer helps. Rozol Mountain Beaver Bait is the only toxicant registered for mountain beaver control, and it is only registered in WA and OR. The FAQ sheet will only be given out by our sales staff, primarily Michael – the one listed on the FAQ sheet, and his sales area doesn't include California. We only have two distributor locations, one in WA and one in OR, who we also might give the FAQ sheet to. The FAQ sheet will not be available publicly, and won't be on our website. So, the FAQ would have to go pretty far astray to end up with someone in CA. Anyone purchasing the bait has to provide a Certified Applicator's license for the respective state they are purchasing it in, which would be WA or OR. Certified Applicators have to keep records of when and where they apply the pesticide. It is possible that someone could purchase the bait in OR and then drive it down to CA, and then falsify their records about where they applied it, but they would know darn well that they are violating their applicator's license.

Does that address your concern?

Katie

Subject: RE: Rozol Mountain Beaver FAQ

I realize I'm going down a slippery slope here, but I will put it out there anyway. I noticed there are several questions that have to do with application restrictions already noted on the label, and it seems to me an important one that is missing is a question such as, "Can I sue Rozol mountain beaver bait to treat mountain beavers in forest plantations in California?" I realize that the label is pretty clear on where the product can be used, and it can only be sold to certified applicators, suggesting they should already know the answer to the question. However, there are other questions on this list related to application timing and rates, clearly spelled out on the label, and it seems like a question about where the product can be used geographically is an important one to add.

My understanding is that there is nothing registered for treating mountain beavers in California (or at least no ARs that are registered), is that correct?

Sue

I like your question better, thanks. Another suggested addition in red to cover not just the geographical "where", but also the activity or agricultural "where".

Where can I use Rozol Mountain Beaver Bait?

Rozol Mountain Beaver Bait is only registered for use in Oregon and Washington, under Special Local Needs Sec24(c) labels in each state. It can only be used west of the crest of the Cascade Mountains in Oregon and in western Washington. Furthermore, application is limited to forestry plantations only. These are restricted use labels and can be used only by state-certified pesticide applicators. The 24(c) label must be in the applicator's possession at the time of application.

Another good idea Sue! I put it in.

And another thought to make answers a bit more comprehensive.

Maybe I'll stop now . . . I don't know ☺

6. Can I use Rozol Mountain Beaver any time I want?

No. The label specifically states that this product cannot be used from mid-May to mid-

September in WA and from mid-May to Sept. 1st in OR. This is to reduce the risk to non-target wildlife from consuming young mountain beavers that have been poisoned. In addition, this product cannot be applied more than once per season.

You're on a roll Sue! I added it in.

Jeff – have you had a chance to figure out whether you want your phone number on it?
