great idea! Its from the Yurok doing monitoring on GrnDmd land; I'll see if they're ok w/a post or share on FWS social too. I asked them for permission to use in my latest fisher feature story that Paul 'requested' last week. He wants to tell all about those successful conservation partnerships, so this would be perfect.

Still in holding for FR publish, bet it happens during one of a few webinars I have this week. emails drafted and waiting for the GO.

Thought you all might appreciate this picture. Who knew that fisher would use beaver dam analogues?

Cumulative benefits of aquatic conservation measures on our California Timberlands. As you know, we implement both an Aquatic HCP for aquatic species and a Forest HCP for terrestrial species and we authorize Yurok Tribe to do habitat restoration and improvement projects on our timberlands. As you see in picture, it all works together. This is lower Klamath River Basin. I will also forward you another fisher picture from our Washington timberlands.

Anecdotal, but indicative of the potential for this species to disperse to (Washington) and thrive on (California) managed timberlands. - Galen
