NEW ASSISTANT DIRECTOR FOR PACIFIC REGION APPOINTED BY BUREAU OF COMMERCIAL FISHERIES

Washington

John B. Glude, Chief of the Branch of Shellfisheries, Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, Washington, D. C., has been appointed Assistant Regional Director of the Pacific Region of the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash. Mr. Glude's appointment became effective April 16, the Department of the Interior said.

The Pacific Region includes Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

Mr. Glude, a native of Bremerton, Wash., has had extensive experience with the fisheries of the Northwest, serving with the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission early in his career and with the Washington State Department of Fisheries at Gig Harbor, Wash., in research on Olympia and Pacific oysters.

He has been in his present position with the Bureau since 1958. Formerly, he was the Chief of Clam Investigations at the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries Biological Laboratories at Woods Hole, Mass., and Boothbay Harbor, Maine; Chief of Atlantic Salmon Investigations at Boothbay Harbor, Maine; and Chief, Clam and Chesapeake Bay Oyster Investigations at the Bureau laboratory in Annapolis, Md. during World War II, he was a naval architect in Tacoma, Wash.

Mr. Glude attended public schools in Silverdale, Wash. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in fishery science in 1939 from the University of Washington, where he also did his graduate work. He was a founding fellow of the American Institute of Fishery Research Biologists and now is vice-president of the National Shellfisheries Association and a member of the American Fisheries Society.

Mr. Glude is married to the former Jean Harrison of Bremerton. They have three children.
