UDALL ANNOUNCES RESERVOIR LAND IN ARIZONA TO BE MANAGED FOR WILDLIFE

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall announced today that 17,300 acres along the Corps of Engineers' Alamo Reservoir will be managed for wildlife by the Arizona Department of Game and Fish.

Alamo Dam is a flood control project on the Bill Williams River which flows into the Colorado River above Parker Dam.

The land in the agreement is known as Ocotillo Game Management Area. It provides access to the water of Alamo Reservoir and will permit the Arizona agency to develop facilities including a launching ramp, floating dock, swimming beach and fishing camp.

The agreement results from a study of the importance of fish and wildlife resources in the area by Interior's Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife and the Arizona Department of Game and Fish.
