

Arthur R. Marshall Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge

Welcome to Arthur R. Marshall Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge, 143,924 acres or 221 square miles, one of over 549 national wildlife refuges that form a network of United States lands and waters managed specifically for wildlife. Refuges provide habitat — food, water, cover, and space — for millions of migratory birds, over 70 endangered species, and thousands of other species of native plants and animals.

The Arthur R. Marshall Loxahatchee National Wildlife Refuge provides habitat and protection for endangered and threatened wildlife such as the American alligator, snail kite, and wood stork. Migratory birds such as neotropical songbirds, secretive marsh birds, shorebirds, and waterfowl winter at the refuge along with year-around resident herons, egrets, and ibis.

Through refuge programs and facilities, visitors can enjoy a variety of educational and wildlife-oriented recreational opportunities. Contact the refuge office for teaching pavilion reservations and for educational group visits. Public access is available at the Headquarters Area (off US 441/SR 7), Hillsboro Area (at the west end of Loxahatchee Road), and at 20-Mile Bend (off CR 880 and 20-Mile Bend Boat Ramp Road).

The refuge is open to the public from sunrise to sunset every day of the year. Hours are posted at each entrance. The Visitor Center is open 9 am - 4 pm seven days a week. The center is closed Thanksgiving and Christmas Day.

An entrance fee of $5 per vehicle or $1 per pedestrian is charged daily. Senior Pass, Access Pass, Annual Pass, Duck Stamp, and Refuge Specific annual passes are available upon request. Entrance fees apply at all three Refuge entrances.
