Birds of the Fergus Falls Wetland Management District

The five county Fergus Falls Wetland District located in western Minnesota is in an area where freshwater prairie wetlands and the associated northern tallgrass prairie join to form a zone of transition with the northern hardwood forest. This blend of habitats provides for an impressive diversity of bird species.

This list contains 290 bird species that have been observed within the District. It includes all common, as well as rare and accidental species that are not normally expected to occur here.

Visiting birders are encouraged to stop in at our office in Fergus Falls to share their sightings with District staff, and to learn more about specific birding locations. Enjoy your visit!
