

The Kodiak National Wildlife Refuge Conservation Film Series presents:

STAND

Mashing adventure with real world issues, STAND takes you into the heart of the Great Bear Rainforest of British Columbia, where a group of surfers take on the protection of pristine waters threatened by crude oil industry developments. The film follows a class of Heiltsuk students who build their own standup paddleboards from locally-sourced red cedar. With fantastic cinematography of these wild lands and water, STAND is a powerful film that shares a unique way of "standing up" to preserve the dwindling wild corners of the globe.
