State Senate Recognizes Georgia-Florida Firefighting Partners

Folkston, GA....Georgia lawmakers have officially recognized the collaboration taking place in Georgia and Florida and the recognition given to this partnership of a prestigious national wildland fire management award. Representatives of the South Georgia-North Florida Fire Initiative were honored at the Georgia State Capitol last month with a visit from Governor Nathan Deal and recognition in the senate chamber and a resolution commending the group for winning the 2015 Pulaski Award. The Pulaski Award is presented by the National Interagency Fire Center for outstanding performance in the areas of interagency collaboration, cooperation, and coordination.

The South Georgia-North Florida Fire Initiative is made up of a collection of organizations and businesses which include the Georgia Forestry Commission, Florida Forest Service, U.S. Forest Service, Osceola National Forest, Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge, the Greater Okefenokee Association of Landowners (GOAL), the Nature Conservancy, the Conservation Fund, Coastal Wildscapes, and Fire Departments from Clinch, Charlton, Ware, and Baker Counties. “We are privileged to live and work in an area such as the Okefenokee, Osceola, and Pinhook Swamp landscapes in southeast Georgia and northeast Florida. This area remains a largely intact ecosystem that is driven by fire and requires fire to survive,” states Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge Project Leader Michael Lusk.

By providing a bridge for partnerships, the South Georgia-North Florida Fire Initiative acts as a pathway between state, federal, and local governments to engage and partner with private and commercial landowners, non-government organizations, and local organizations with an interest in wildfire protection. For example, the group has participated in the formation of the Okefenokee Osceola Local Implementation Team (O2LIT), a partnership of federal, state, private, and commercial groups dedicated to landscape scale longleaf pine restoration. The O2LIT is a longleaf implementation team which strives to educate the public on the importance of fire in all aspects ranging from prescribed fire, wildfire suppression and preparedness in this unique landscape.

The success of the South Georgia-North Florida Initiative lies in each partners’ willingness to work where the most good can be accomplished, regardless of ownership. Thousands of acres of fuels treatment through prescribed burning and mechanical hazard fuel reduction projects have been completed, as well as thousands of longleaf pine seedlings planted. “The value is in knowing that when we must act, we are better prepared to defend our communities, our properties, our homes, and our livelihoods. The South Georgia-North Florida Fire Initiative has accomplished outstanding work and will continue to do so for years to come,” says Lusk.
