

Togiak Refuge doesn't receive as many visitors as many refuges.

Location is why.

If you were to fly from wherever you are at, you'd first fly to Anchorage, Alaska.

Then you would fly another 327 miles southwest to Dillingham. Dillingham is the regional hub and jumping off point for the Refuge. It is where the Refuge offices are.

From Dillingham, you can then charter another flight to get to wherever you plan to go on the refuge.

Sorry folks; no roads to help you out here!
